

Procedural Writing: Soup Exercise

The scenario:

Your friend texts you this soup recipe. The soup sounds great, but you have trouble following the recipe because the text messages weren't sent in a format or order that is easy to write or read as procedural material.

You have two jobs.

- Research online and find examples of recipes you consider easy-to-follow. Link to 5 example recipes and summarize what these recipes have in common (in terms of both format and content).
- Rewrite your friend's soup recipe in a format that would make it easier to follow in the future. Imagine trying to follow the procedure as you write. Don't worry about adding images or creating fancy layouts, but please do give it a descriptive title.

The texts:

